

The Toolbox

The toolbox is full
It has many convenient tools
For the rich and powerful to choose
To manage our lives
So they win, and we lose

They love to borrow and spend
As a global debt crisis largely looms
Bailout banks and corporations
Without giving us the right to choose
So they win, and we lose

They build tanks and planes
And deadly missiles that cruise
Waste resources fighting senseless wars
While our economies suffer the blues
They always win, as we lose

They export jobs to whomever they choose
As millions of workers languish in poverty
Import our shorts, socks and shoes
And as homeless people sleep in public parks
They fly their corporate jets and cruise
They do not care who wins as long as we lose

Traditional economists seem to have no clues
That the world has changed so much
It invalidated their classical tools
But why should they worry

They make money, as we lose
We have lost our jobs and homes
And have nothing more to lose
They grin as they win and we lose
Thinking we are the world's only fools

But standing together
We empower each other
Create global power
Change our world forever
Win, and never lose
